We had the pleasure of hearing the first number of the Philomathean Headlight, the college paper, read last Friday night, by the Editor, Miss Marie Capers, assisted by Miss Stella Broyles. It is "rare, rich and racy" in its make-up, and we consider we have a formidable rival in the Headlight.

The Philomathean Society which has been organized by the pupils of the Savannah Male and Female College is proving quite interesting to the public, as well as instructive to its members. At the meeting last Friday evening the recitations by Misses Stella Broyles, Fannie Broyles, Maud Morrow and Jewell Hanna showed marked improvement in elocution and gestures. Maud Morrow, who is a natural elocutionist, took the audience by storm, as it was her first appearance before the public in this place, and she carried off the honors of the evening. The President, Wm. Hurst, presided with ease and self-possession, and the Secretary, Miss Lena Donohoo, displayed in a marked degree, her great executive ability. The Savannah Orchestra, composed of Messrs. Jim Bain, Charlie Doran, Tom Seaman and Charlie Williams, furnished the excellent music which added so much to the enjoyment of all. You cannot spend an hour and a half more pleasantly or profitably, in a literary sense, than by attending these exercises on Friday nights.

W. P. Cherry, col., has gone to Jackson to attend Lane Institute.

DIED.

Friday, Nov. 28, 1890, little Mildred, the two-months-old babe of Mr. and Mrs. Charlie East. Too frail and delicate a flower to battle with the storms and withering blasts of this world, it has been transplanted to a more congenial clime. Like a sweet and transient floweret, it was lent only for a short season to delight the hearts of earthly parents, then it was called to its Heavenly Father, whose loving touch and gentle voice will soothe and animate it more than all earthly friends.

"I thought there grew on earthly ground Some buds without decay, But never yet have I found a flower That does not fade away."

Godey for December is on our table and all the fair sex are crazy to get it; no wonder, it is a real holiday number, and, like a Christmas stocking, overflowing with good things. All are here provided with good seasonable reading; two pretty frontispiece illustrations are an attractive addition, while colored and black designs for fashions show how to make all articles in the latest mode. Pretty work designs give many useful hints for making Christmas gifts, while the whole household cannot fail to be pleased with the good and varied Christmas reading. Now is the time to subscribe for 1891. Godey Publishing Co., Philadelphia, Pa. $2.00 per year.

LITERARY NOTES.

The Christmas edition of the Cosmopolitan Magazine is one hundred thousand copies. The order, as originally given to the printers, was for 85,000 copies, but while on the press it was thought advisable to increase the number to 100,000.

It contains a feature never before attempted by any magazine, consisting of 123 cartoons from the brush of Dan Beard, the now famous artist, who did such wonderful illustrations in Mark Twain's book, "The Yankee at the Court of King Arthur."

These cartoons are placed at the bottom of each page of the magazine, and take for their subject, "Christmas during the Eighteen Centuries of the Christian Era," with variations, showing the way in which we modern christians carry out some of the chief texts of the Christian Gospel.

Above and at each side of the page is a quaint border, the whole effect being novel and extremely pleasing and with the unusually varied table of contents, will make such a Christmas number as is worthy to go into more than 100,000 households.

The frontispiece of the Cosmopolitan have of late become noted for their beauty some of them having as much as four printings. That for Christmas while in but two printings, is not behind anything that has preceded it in artistic merit.

An excellently illustrated article is one on teapots, by Eliza Rhamah Seidmore. Literary Boston is treated with numerous portraits, and an article which comes with the twentieth birthday of Von Moltke, sketches the life of the great Field-Marshal in an interesting way, and is by Gen. James Grant Wilson. Elizabeth Bland has one of her charming articles.

The Christmas issue contains 238 illustrations, nearly double the number that have ever appeared in any illustrated magazine.
